DAILY RECORD-UNION

THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1890.

AN EXAMPLE OF VICIOUS POLITICS.

In the election fraud trials in Hudson county New Jersey, there was manifested last week the most remarkably oblique of moral vision and insensibility to crime that we have ever heard of. The local report runs thus in part:

When Judge Lippincott and Paxton resumed their seats this morning, Paxton was recalled. He was asked how he happened to be a clerk in the First District when he was a resident of the second. He replied that he did not know, but that he knew another man who did the same thing. He left his post during the day to vote in his own district, but did not record his leaving. He admitted ignorance of the method of keeping poll-books. Questioned on the frauds discovered in his books, Paxton could not account for the entries on the poll-book of the names of five men of one family who did not go near the ballot-box on election day, nor for the names of several dead men that appeared there also.

On the 17th of June, 1889, at Montgomery street, said that on the day of election he was present at headquarters and signed affidavits to meet that the names included represented men legally qualified to vote. The witness admitted that he knew none of the men enrolled, and signed the affidavits, knowing that he was regular and cash-bound. He did not mean to swear to what he signed, but he did know that the paper was previously examined and signed by a notary.

"Did you think that an honest act," asked Prosecutor Winfield.

"I knew it was a political act," was the reply.

Here were men appointed to most important stations, to aid in determining what was the will of the people; but they appear to have had no idea whatever of the solemnity of the obligations under which they acted—or at least they were so callous in conscience that they committed the most unblushing frauds and perjury without a twinge, and one of them even excused his action by saying "There are others as bad as I." The second attempted to screen his crime behind the excuse of "political action." Both knew they were guilty. One lied in the effort to excuse himself. The other told the truth. There are plenty of men as bad as he, men who have defrauded voters, stolen the weapons of the American sovereign, and reversed the will of the people by stuffing poll-books and cramming ballot-boxes. But the second, while he evasively lied, did give the key to the reason for his moral strabismus—that is, vicious politics. It was not a political act to swear falsely, but it was a political act of the order that bosom excites. The insensibility of the two Jersey witnesses, the apparent fearlessness of their replies and their attempted defenses go to show to what a low level political corruption and unscrupulousness may bring men.

ORIGINAL PACKAGE BUSINESS.

It is said that in North Dakota on the Prohibition law going into effect, about half the saloons opened out as original package establishments, while about one-half went out of business. Under the Dakota interpretation of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, importers of liquors in original packages have the right to sell the goods in the same packages in which received, so that while treating over the bar is at an end, the traffic will go on in the form of sales of bottles, vials, sealed tumblers and test tubes and the like. If this is the construction of the law, then we have misapprehended the interpretation by the Supreme Court. That tribunal held that when the sealed or original package has reached its destination and been delivered, it becomes a part of the common property of the State, and is subject to the local regulation laws. Now it would seem that this means delivery of the original package to the consignee, not the sale by him of the goods to any other who may come along. If, however, the Dakota construction is sound, then the system has simply been changed in form and the Court has really decided that local regulation of the liquor traffic cannot be maintained. We do not believe, however, that the Supreme Court will submit to any such construction of its recent decision, and shall continue to so believe until the Court itself decides that the Dakota construction is sound. If that happens, then indeed the temperance question will be forced into National politics, and it will be impossible to keep it out. That this is a desirable position in which to place it may well be doubted, even by those with communities and States, and ought not to be removed to a broader jurisdiction.

GOOD VETOS.

President Harrison will be commended by public judgment for his vetoes of certain bills making appropriations for new public buildings in towns of minor importance. He well says that in a town of no great population, where the whole public service requires only a Postmaster and two clerks, there is no need for a costly structure.

The truth is that the demand for public buildings in such places is not a genuine one—it is simply the result of the vicious "ride" and trading system. A bill is introduced providing for the erection of a public building at a point where there is legitimate demand and imperative need for it, and where true economy dictates that it should be erected. Concerning the merit of the proposition there is perhaps no question raised; but other Congressmen, anxious to win local favor, immediately begin to offer amendments to the bill in the nature of "riders," or to introduce other bills for public buildings that are unnecessary. These bills provide for appropriations for buildings in towns in their districts where clearly the public service does not require them. The author of the original bill discovers that these riders and tail-end bills are threats, in fact, to defeat his measure, unless he purchases the vote of the authors by agreeing to support the supplemental propositions. It is not putting the matter too strongly to say "purchase the support," for that is precisely what the scheme means. These supplemental chinchings bills are numerous enough to involve the loss of the original measure, if the authors of the coercive bills combine, and since their interest is a common one against the treasury they tacitly "pull together." Trades are thus put up and the delivery of the goods cannot well be prevented in most cases, save by the intervention of the Executive veto.

The French Government is taking energetic steps to prevent the cholera spreading into that territory. The Surgeon-General of the United States expresses the belief that the pest will not reach this country. So it may not, and yet it may. There are three regular steam packet lines weekly between Spanish and Atlantic ports on this continent. The disease is transmissible by ships carrying goods or passengers. Spain sends us to weekly tons of fruit and more tons of textile fabrics. She sends us from two to three hundred passengers per month. Now, unless we take precautions to bar out vessels coming from infected ports, what reason have we to hope to escape the plague? Thus far not a single thing has been done to prevent its introduction. But that is the American way—we are a "happy go easy" lot, and believe in the maxim "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Wisdom, however, would direct us to "prepare in the time of peace for the assault of war."

The San Francisco papers are just now engaged in the delightful fraternal task of exposing each other's tricks and devices in "padding" dispatches, operating grapevine wires and filling up mammoth editions and blanket sheets with revamped stories of a fishy odor and an ancient smell. Were we disposed to do so, we could point out daily the most ludicrous and pitiful frauds in the embazoned dispatches these mammoth sheets, here and at the East, print as news reports. In very many instances they are stories of the back number related and foisted upon a credulous public as news. But the business of publishing genuine news is too engrossing to leave time for exposure of all news frauds in the sensational press.

VENTURA ASPHALT.

Something about the New Lawn Tennis Court.

The Sacramento Lawn Tennis Club is paving two courts at the angle of the pavilion grounds, on Fifteenth and M streets, with Ventura asphalt. The work has excited a great deal of interest because of the spirit of street and walkway improvement now moving the people.

A Record-Union reporter visited the grounds yesterday to see how the work was progressing and to pick up any items that might be of interest. He found, Adrian R. Smith, the representative of the contractors, Capt. Barton & Co., of San Francisco, on the grounds. Mr. Smith first showed him the rock as it came from the mine. It has very much the appearance of coal, but of finer grain and greater specific gravity. He stated that it was a California product, the mines being located about four and a half miles north of Ventura, that the rock was in regularly defined ledges, varying from one foot to thirty-four feet in width, and that the quarry was inexhaustible.

He gave the reporter also an analysis by Professor Henry G. Hanks, showing that the rock contained: Fixed bitumen, 24.4 per cent; volatile bitumen, none; silica, lime, carbonate, etc., 75.6 per cent.

Ex-State Mineralogist Hanks' report states that the following properties were observed: "The mineral is unusually hard and tough; it begins to soften at 212° Fahr.; it becomes waxy at 245°; begins to volatilize at 347°; but is not liquid, and begins to melt at 385°." It is not affected by salt water or gases, and is not decomposed and destroyed by combustion.

The reporter then examined one of the lawn tennis courts, partly laid, and found that an asphalt concrete, composed of Ventura asphalt and common gravel, had been laid to a depth of two inches, and on top of that one inch of what is termed surface dressing, the latter being of about equal parts Ventura asphalt and fine sand.

The concrete of itself was evidently able to withstand enormous pressure, such as no ordinary street pavement would be subjected to.

A section of the surface dressing had just been laid prior to the arrival of the reporter on the grounds, and although it was so hot as to preclude the "laying on of hands," yet it did not give under the weight of persons walking on it or show the indentation of heels.

"Is this not a very heavy and altogether too strong a pavement for the requirements of a tennis court?" asked the reporter.

"It is, indeed," replied Mr. Smith: "it is, in fact, a street pavement, and of strength and durability far beyond the requirements of a tennis court; but we were anxious to show the property-owners and citizens of Sacramento generally the full merits of our material, both for street paving and sidewalk work. The Lawn Tennis Club is composed of prominent property-owners and people interested in street improvements, and in no more forcible way could we show them the strength, merit and heat-resisting qualities of our material."

"How does this asphalt-concrete compare with Portland cement concrete in cost and durability?" asked the reporter.

"Herman Schuessler, Chief Engineer of the Spring Valley Water Works, has tested this material, and found it to be 925 pounds to the square inch, which is about three times the tensile strength of Portland cement concrete. As to durability, asphalt concrete is indestructible, and it is also in a marked degree more elastic, and is not brittle."

"How does your pavement compare in cost with asphalt pavements in the East and in California?"

"Trinidad asphalt pavements in Buffalo cost $5 per square yard. Bituminous rock pavements in California, average about $2.70. Our price is $2.25."

"How does your material compare with bituminous rock?"

"According to the report of the State Mineralogist the best bituminous rock contains 23 per cent. fixed bitumen and 18 per cent. volatile bitumen. Ventura asphalt contains 24.4 per cent. fixed bitumen and no volatile bitumen whatever."

"You seem to lay particular stress upon the fact that you have no volatile bitumen in your rock?"

"When you stop to consider that the volatile bitumen will all pass off by atmospheric contact in the course of a few years, and that the bitumen is the so-called life or binding force which keeps the pavement together, I do not think you will blame me for laying 'particular stress' upon it."

"Have you had many?"

"A great number of people have called and examined our work, and we are anxious to have all interested in good street pavements for Sacramento thoroughly inspect our material and our work. W. H. Worwick, the Vice-President and Chief Engineer of the Ventura Asphalt Company, is superintending the work here and will have charge of all work in Sacramento, and he says he will give all visitors a full and intelligent description of the material and the uses to which it can be adapted."

"Most sidewalks laid with bituminous rock over wooden planks crack over the spaces between the boards. Can you avoid that cracking?" suggested the reporter.

"We can. We first fill up all the interstices with asphalt tempered so as to resist great heat, and our sidewalk is laid over planks practically cemented together, and you can see from the work now before you that we can make our sidewalks as smooth and uniform as the best cement sidewalks."
